

Where two creeds meet: A sincere evaluation of Calvinism and Arminianism

From the Preface: While recovering from a serious illness and enjoying sweet communion with my Lord, I was directed to re-enter the evangelistic field and do some special writing. A subject was suggested with the impression that I should write a small book on the three meeting points of Calvinism and Arminianism. Seven years of earnest study have followed with an earnest purpose to know and to teach the whole truth on this great controversial subject of Protestantism. Writings on both sides have been carefully studied, and scholarly ministers and teachers have been counseled with sincere purpose to gather truth and present it without vituperation or name calling, but in the spirit of Christian love. A very thorough study of all scripture bearing on this subject has been made with determination to avoid doctrinal coloring and know exactly what the Bible teaches. The wording of the subject requires a bit of explanation. I see these two branches of Protestantism meeting in mutual desire to win souls and build the Kingdom, either in Christian love or in angry debate. For want of better wording, it seemed my subject should be Where Two Creeds Meet. Now a creed is a statement of theology, belief, or doctrine, hence my use of the word is exceeding the common meaning of the term. But, in the light of a familiar connotation, the reader will understand that when I say creed I am referring to a school of theology and a branch of Protestantism.
